FROM THE SHELVES:

GREAT SUMMER MYSTERIES

Do you like a good mystery? Do you enjoy reading more than one book with the same heroine or hero? Try these summer reads:

Kills by Linda Fairstein

Scribner, 2004

No one can tell the story of a big-city sex crimes prosecutor better than someone who has actually been one. There is a lot of the author in Alexandra Cooper, the protagonist of this novel. When an investment banker cries rape, it's not the open and shut case that Alex originally envisions. Why did her rapist begin acting strangely before the attack? What happened to his young son that night? Alex uses her detective buddies, Mercer and Mike, to help her make the case. This is the sixth Alex Cooper mystery.

April Fool Dead, by Carolyn Hart

Harper Collins, 2002

Follow mystery bookstore owner, Annie Darling, as her (gorgeous) husband, Max, is accused of murder. This time it's personal. Check out Annie's other adventures in sleuthing in any of the "A Death on Demand" mysteries.

Nail Biter, by Sarah Graves

Bantam, 2006

Does an old Victorian home in need of constant repair sound familiar? Gather home repair tips from Jake (Jacobia) Tiptree as she becomes embroiled in yet another murder. The folks of Eastport, Maine, will welcome you into their lives. You can read others in this "Home Repair is Homicide" series.

Devil's Claw, by J.A. Jance

William Morrow, 2000

This author has two mystery series. One stars J.P. Beaumont of the Seatle P.D. The other showcases the life and crime-solving of Joanna Brady. Left a widow with a young daughter, Joanna fills her husband's position as Cochise county sheriff, much to the dismay of the male officers on the force and her mother. In Devil's Claw, her neighbor is murdered and Joanna must not only solve the case, but deal with her upcoming wedding, a meddlesome mother and an adolescent daughter.

Baltimore Blues, by Laura Lippman

Avon Books, 1997

The first in the series of Tess Monaghan novels, Baltimore Blues introduces the unemployed newspaper reporter. Tess knows everything about Baltimore and its inhabitants, so she agrees to help prove a friend innocent of murder. Tess barely manages to keep herself out of trouble as she delves the secrets of her hometown.

Last Breath, by Mariah Stewart

Ballantine, 2007

Reacquaint yourself with FBI agent Connor Shields when he helps archeologist, Daria McGowan, locate missing Middle Eastern artifacts. The couple discovers that not only are items missing but that a series of collectors have been brutally murdered. Add in a rumor of a curse and you have the makings of a great tale.
